LEAN SOCIETY OF NEW

A. MONTE A. E. SERRAVALLO

THE AGE OF AUSTRALIA.
The twenty-fifth annual general meeting of the Society of New South Wales was held at Mason Hall, Elizabeth Bay, last evening. The hon. Norton, LL.D., M.L.C., was in the chair. The minutes of the previous annual general meeting were read and confirmed. The President delivered his annual address to the members. In the course of his remarks he said:

During the year 1900-1901 the expenditure on bacteriology amounted to £126. During the year 40 papers on various subjects had been read and various interesting papers produced. Following the custom of the society, Dr. Norton devoted the part of his address to a discussion of some of interest to the members. That chosen was "The Age of Australia," and in the very different in shape, size, and features. It is at the present day, and it is evident that the same is true of the past. Not only in the past, but also New Guinea, formed part of the same land. In the general instability of everything on this earth, after its birth, or the greater portion of it, has been several times submerged beneath the waves, and has been raised up again, and again, to its present form. It is certain, in the case of the New Guinea, that the land, in the past, as it extended considerably more to the east, than at present, and that in the west there was a range of high mountains, from the western base of which the New Guinea has been raised up. A great basin, over the center of which there was a low range, which extended from beyond the rise on the north to Shoolavava on the south, and beyond the north on the west to a distance of 100 miles, and then to the west, where the land, then, existed, and in this basin was formed a great mass of coal, which is of such enormous mass of coal, which is of such enormous gradually subsided during the formation of the coal, and in the triassic period was again raised to the Pacific level. This subsidence may have been due wholly to the weight of the enormous mass of sediment on the semi-fluid underlying material, or to the accumulation of vegetable matter, which was gradually converted into coal; and secondly, by the weight of the coal layer, which would have affected the strata beneath it.

In the metamorphic things the eastern portion of the submerged basin was cut off and partially lost, though the residue, consolidated by the weight of the overlying strata, was raised once again, but again sank so as to allow the deposition of the Wisconsin shale over the sandstone and the deposition of the cretaceous beds at the base of the Wisconsin.

It is in Queensland, South Australia, West Australia, and New Zealand, that the most extensive evidence is to be seen of the subsidence of the Pacific. Finally, the remnant of the great basin was again raised, and the Pacific was again raised to the tertiary era, since which there has been no further subsidence of any importance. Well known is that Australia, being an entire continent, was raised to the Pacific level, and gradually sank in it, as indicated by the gradual subsidence of New Caledonia and certain other Southern death that, counting as geologists do, is not so unusual, which took place in the middle of the Tertiary era, she comprehends the identity of the fossil bones of man and of the extinct races of man, and that the earth is older than the Tertiary era is possible, and if any races passed on (Godwin's) calculation, she places rather any estimate, as to the length of time that the earth has existed, at upwards of 92,420,000 years, while she says that the time which has elapsed since life first appeared on the earth amounts to no less than one-seventh of the whole.

The annual meeting of the society was held after tea, when the following gentlemen were present:—President, Hon. James Knollys, M.P.; Vice-Presidents, Mr. John Lubbock, F.R.S., F.L.S., W. W. Fitzgerald, F.R.S., Chas. F. F. F.L.S., A. H. S. Lucas, M.A., B.A., Hon. Steel, F.R.S., F.P.S., Edward G. W. Palmer, and Dr. Duncan Cameron.

Following gentlemen were elected members of the society:—Mr. P. G. Black, N. S. Symonds, Mr. M. L. C. Potts, Mr. George Edgerly, Mr. J. H. M. Street, and Mr. John A. Ferguson.

the evening the following papers were read: Descriptions of new Australian Lepidoptera (Diptera) from New South Wales by G. A. Waterhouse; Catalogue of the Fishes of the Waters of Lake Taupo, New Zealand by W. G. W. Watts and Thomas Whitley, F.R.S.; and communications on the Orangethroat Parakeet by J. H. M. Forster and on coral chabbers, by Professor J. T. Wilson, Ph.D.

A luncheon served as a preliminary to the affair, which was laid on the table at 2.30 p.m., at which Mr. D. Blundel (president of the association) presided. Mr. H. Paterson (manager New Vale's Fresh Food and Ice Company) acted as toastmaster, and amongst others present were Messrs.

W. Grant (hon. treasurer), Brown, Campbell and Parker (members of committee). Customary loyal toasts having been disposed of, the chairman proposed that of "Success to the South Wales Fresh Food and Ice Company's Vendors' Association," which was responded to by Sykes. scourges that afflict mankind, it is essential to the public interest, and that the best way of combating it and minimising the danger of its spread once its presence is declared is to enforce a thorough system of isolation and quarantine. It is, however, a mistake to suppose that the fact that it would not be correct to say that the bubonic bacillus would never have found its way here had Sydney been an ideal sanitary city. The measures of the common law of every export, and no possible precautions would suffice to keep the plague out. We are in ports where the plague is known to flourish, and with it other diseases like smallpox and leprosy, of an equally malignant and repulsive nature. We are therefore specially bound to take every care to make the city unfit to offer a harbourage for these diseases, and to see that the conditions under which we live are not such as would favour the permanence of bubonic disease and render it endemic. These are titles which the Commissioners have to the confidence of the men. It is improbable that the railway service could go on without dangerous friction under circumstances in which men were "in dozens of cases" harshly and unjustly removed without appeal or even defence. The country grown at Wages, the climate of which district seems especially favourable to the growth of the tree. Plantations on a small scale have also been established at Home, Bousley, and Bellais. Supported by this official testimony of the adaptability of our country districts for the growth of the olive tree, should follow active on the part of our city area during the past few days will have come with a shock of unpleasant surprises to many people. It is true that complaints are continually being made about the inability of municipal authority to cope with its responsibilities in this respect, and we have repeatedly had to direct attention to the employees out of the hands of the Commissioners and putting it in those of some departmental or outside body like the proposed appeal board. In every service there must be a final authority, especially in a service like the railways, to which daily numbers of people entrust their lives and safety: there must be some time of the dearth of new industries and of employment for workmen; but it would seem that the remedy often lies in the hands of those who make the complaints. Mr. W. S. Campbell, of the Department of Agriculture, states that he is confident that if the best variety of tree is cultivated, and the oil expressed with streets, garbage boxes encumbering the footpaths, imperfectly drained and ill-regulated premises, and until the other day we had the rubbish tip. But it was left to the exertions of the sanitary corps now labouring in the quarantined area under Mr. McCreddie's direction to disclose such conditions of filth and dirt as would have been overlooked by the Commission.

The Commission has to supervise. We ought to beware of weakening their management and introducing outside complications. The Commissioners are charged with the duty of administering the railways in the interest of the whole community, not those of disaffected employees or of those who would take advantage of any weakness which they might find in the management.

The Confirmation is lent to this view from the statement made that in European countries the olive oil is in a large measure subjected to adulteration by the mixture of inferior oils such as those from cotton seed and peanut with the more valuable product. Apart from its use in the manufacture of oil the olive is much that the Government has not been employing a small army of 650 men on the work on which they are now usefully employed, it is far from satisfactory to learn that there has existed in our midst for an indefinite period such a crying demand for these drastic measures. It is to be remembered, of course, that the infected area comprises one of the oldest and the most densely populated in the Colony. The change from steam or cable to electricity proceeds on our tramways. Already the North Sydney lines have been transformed to a uniform electric system.

From one block along 800 tons of rubbish had been removed by yesterday, and the revelations made as to its character and the circumstances under which it was allowed to collect are sufficient to excite wonder, not that the plague had found a lodgment there, but that the city was not lever-swept from such a source of infection long since. We had and clean electric system must favourably compare with steam motive power. Postal Guide are reasonable, unless an English mail is expected, when it is intended that special

Indeed, it is much more agreeable to reflect that it is now becoming a thing of the past so far as this quartering of the sick is concerned.

The operations of the sanitary corps have disclosed a state of things for which the public was not prepared; but who is to say that similar conditions do not exist in other localities? Is the Government to go on with this work of city cleaning, or is the

It is not desired to hamper the Council at such a time as this, by harsh criticism of its shortcomings, but the ratepayers have a clear right to express their minds unambiguously on the situation which has been disclosed. We should not have to wait for an epidemic of hubeonic plague before services are stopped.

The argument is that the new system will save the Government's time to be valuable to be spent in hearing employees' appeals, numbering some 200 annually, and hence, such appeals being neglected, men are at the mercy of their superior officers. To this argument, a rather interesting return was submitted a few days ago. It embodied the results of three months' inspection by the board of horses used in licensed vehicles. The necessity for this inspection has been so often shown that further argument on the subject is not necessary, but if any demonstration the French Office, Kingston, that the newspaper be not any longer published.

Avertissements are classified as far as possible for the quantity of space they occupy, and are charged accordingly in the first line of the extract of copy, value of the insertion being added to the price of the line. While every care is taken in classification, no responsibility is assumed for errors.

All advertisements under 10 lines will be charged by the advertiser's account if not paid for by Cheque.

Adverts in country are not paid for by Cheque, Money Order, Postal Note, or Postal Note.

Births, Deaths and Marriages are charged per insertion. They include publication in the Bulletin.

Notices of BURIALS and of FUNERALS are inserted in the Journal unless ordered with the same as the persons to whom they refer.

Notices of MARRIAGES and of WEDDINGS are inserted unless ordered by the officiant and are not required for the price. It is required however in consequence of the fact that notices may be inserted in the Journal for the purpose of settling respectable persons.
